WEBMEDX, INC. ACQUIRES TRANSHEALTH, LLC.

Leading Medical Transcription Outsourcing Firm Attracted by Community-based Health Care focus and Nashville Presence

ATLANTA – Atlanta-based national medical transcription provider Webmedx announced today that it has acquired Nashville-based TransHealth. Webmedx will build on the strong local reputation of TransHealth by establishing its national field operations center to Nashville.

With the acquisition Webmedx will grow its U.S.-based workforce to approximately 800 people. TransHealth founder and CEO Joseph Storey will become executive vice president of Webmedx according to Sean Carroll, Webmedx CEO.

“One of the great things about this partnership is that both companies have shared a similar approach to doing business,” said Storey, who noted that TransHealth traditionally has focused on small to mid-sized community hospitals while Webmedx has served larger regional facilities. “Both of our companies are dedicated to very high levels of customer service and are highly integrated with our customers from a technology standpoint. We’ve both remained committed to high-quality transcription.”

Carroll noted that the Webmedx growth strategy was not principally based on acquisitions but that highly strategic opportunities were always of interest.

“Having a strong presence in one of the most important health care markets in the world, Nashville, TN clearly adds to our strategic growth plan. As well, TransHealth has excelled in servicing a different sector of the market which we feel important to our future. Most importantly, TransHealth subscribes to our belief that a remarkable employee experience leads to a remarkable client experience and that’s what clients deserve in today’s challenging health care market,” stated Carroll.
